

NOW HIRING

SEASONAL ENVIRONMENTAL EDUCATOR & CAMP LEAD

Spend time outside teaching elementary schoolers through South Platte River Environmental Education (SPREE) programs and running a SPREE Summer Camp.

This nine-month position with The Greenway Foundation's SPREE program offers a wide range of experiences in environmental education and youth development. In the spring and fall, the position involves working with a team of educators to lead preschool-5th grade students on environmental education field trips. Field trips have grade-specific curriculum, and take place at multiple park locations along the South Platte River. You will also assist with SPREE educational events. From June-August, you will work as a summer camp leader and will be trained to manage a camp location, including making daily schedules, preparing materials, and overseeing and mentoring camp staff. Other responsibilities include leading campers through daily activities, crafts and games about the environment, as well as ensuring the health and safety of the campers at all times. In addition, Camp Leads will work with middle and high-school-aged educators-in-training. All programs take place outdoors in Denver public parks.

HOW TO APPLY

Interested applicants should email a resume, cover letter, and 3 references to Julianne Gagnon.

Position will remain open until filled.
